Johnny-come-latelies

We think the Zone 11 Water Advisory Committee should ignore the pontifications of the Johnny-come-latelies on the new water management agency and seek a tax election without the JPA's blessing.

The hard-working members of Zone 11 have been studying all the intricacies of the area's water problems for three years, looking into alternatives to another dam on the Carmel River and exploring even some rather dubious theories which might pay off. But they have been plugging away as lay people, developing a great deal of expertise, until they have reached a point where they know they need professional help. Professional help costs money.

Zone 11, after lengthy discussions on the matter over several months, decided to ask the board of supervisors for an eight cent tax rate election. Then the water management clique got together to solve the water problem. (We think it's interesting that the water management agency members speak only of one problem, while Zone 11 members have continually talked about plural problems, plural alternatives and plural solutions.)

At a sub-committee meeting Monday in Monterey, the three voting members of the agency present made it pretty clear they would not favor Zone 11's request for agency support of the election before the board of supervisors. They spoke of money, psychology and politics.

In explaining his opposition, Fourth District Supervisor Roger Poyner said, "Let's assume we're both at the same place." What he doesn't seem to realize is that Zone 11 is three years ahead of the new agency. Almost all the material the JPA is working with has been dug out and publicized by Zone 11.

We think some of the members of the JPA simply haven't been doing their homework, as private citizens or as elected officials. The representative from Del Rey Oaks has asked at every meeting, "What is Zone 11, anyway?" and yet he feels secure enough in his position to vote against support of Zone 11's request.

It becomes clear the members of the water management agency are afraid of any action which they believe may delay getting the ban on new water hookups lifted. If successful, this election could lead to two years of study, which the JPA seems fearful will mean two years of building moratorium.

It simply isn't so. Zone 11 has always worked and, we sincerely hope, will continue to work toward the long-range solutions of the various water problems on the Monterey Peninsula. If the water management agency wants to resign itself to a 90-day life and direct its attention to short-range goals such as lifting the water ban, so be it.

In the meantime, we suggest the JPA defer to Zone 11 on the matter of the election. We encourage Zone 11 to continue to seek the election from the board of supervisors. The studies which are needed will cost money, and we don't think the JPA member cities are going to be willing to pony up much more than their initial $1,000 each.

Letters to Editor

Dear Editor:

I am a taxpayer. I am also a candidate for the 29th Assembly district.

My feeling is that the aim of an office holder should be to limit spending. For this reason, I did not take advantage of the new law which permits a candidate to evade the payment of a filing fee by submitting a petition instead. I paid my filing fee of $232.32.

I feel that this law is a good one in that it permits a poor man to file on the same level as a man whose resources are large. However, while I am not a rich man, I still feel that I must pay my fee.

'Literally' a trash problem

Arby Mann says it's like the weather — everyone talks about it, but no one will do anything about it. The problem he sees is trash and litter in the Village commercial district.

Mann, who works for the White Oaks Inn, says the problem isn't confined to his territory alone. Walking across part of the 12 acre plot, he scuffs at a beer can with his foot.

"Two weeks ago, I had cleaned all of this out of here, and now it seems to be worse than ever. Because people, especially school children on their way home, find it convenient to cross down this way, probably on their way to Robles del Rio, they also find it convenient to drop their litter here," Mann says.

Fenceposts and barbed wire are virtually destroyed where Village Drive deadends at Paso Hondo, which is where a traditional public access across the Marks property exists.

"My employer says she used to fix the fence and in six days it would be torn down again, so now we just let it go," Mann says.

Mann says the sheriff has told him that as a private Scenes like these detract from the beauty of Carmel Valley, and Arby Mann believes that more concern on the part of individuals and active efforts by local pressure groups could help alleviate the problem of trash and litter in the Village's commercial district.

citizen he can take pictures of people dropping litter and later have them cited, or he can make a citizen's arrest for littering. "But how can one individual patrol 12 acres trying to catch people littering?" Mann asks.

Mann says the problem is not limited to the White Oaks property either. "Shopkeepers pretty much keep up the fronts but then they allow trash to pile up in back of their property. Because most of them are renting their space, they seem to believe it's not their responsibility for the land beyond the square footage they're paying for."

Mann says he offered to personally clean up one stretch of uncared for commercial land where trash was accumulating, but adjacent shopkeepers wouldn't agree to him putting the debris in their dumpsters.

"Everyone seems to agree there's a trash problem, but if solving it is going to cost them any effort or any money, they would rather see someone else handle it,"

Mann says.

Mann would like to see the Chamber of Commerce or the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association take an active role in cleaning up the commercial area, but admits it's a problem of human nature.

"You drive through the residential areas and you see spic and span yards, because that's where the people live and they feel a responsibility for it," Mann says. "But they don't seem to feel equally responsible for other people's land."

Subcommittee nixes Zone 11 election

Members of the water management agency sub-committee on long-range solutions to the peninsula water problem vetoed Zone 11's request for support of a tax rate election at a meeting Monday afternoon in Monterey.

Fifth District Supervisor Sam Farr's conservation sub-committee meeting failed to materialize.

Most speakers said they thought June was a bad time to "sell" the electorate on a tax rate election. Others indicated they believed the proposed expenditures by Zone 11 were exorbitant or unnecessary.

Zone 11 chairman Manuel DeMaria told the committee, "No one wants to see a tax rate election, but before we go to the people for a water district or to build a dam or anything else, we want to be able to spell it all out, let them know exactly what it will cost them. The studies we propose will accomplish that."

Responding to comments that perhaps the joint powers agency was a more appropriate group to make the studies, DeMaria said, "When you say that you can raise the money, are you planning to spend the $250,000 you'll need to do all the studies you really have to have?"

Fourth District Supervisor Roger Poyner admitted, "Sam (Farr) and I got the supervisors to cough up our initial $1,000 but the next $1,000 may be next to impossible."

Poyner suggested, "We need to find an entity suitable for our uses. Perhaps it would be more palatable to seek approval for a new district and a tax rate at the same time, than to go for a tax for Zone 11 now, then ask for another tax and district later."

"I'm not convinced we can sell this election," he continued. "If we lose, it may cast a negative pall over everything else we try to do. I think we should wait until we can give this a positive approach."

Chairman of the agency and the sub-committee Mayor Peter Coniglio of Monterey said, "My feeling, and I believe Sam's as well, is that the election is premature. Let's wait until we've got something to sell (to the people). Let's get the parameters defined."

Executive secretary Frank Langham pointed out, "We don't know who the supervisors will be in six months, either." The board of supervisors would levy the tax and administer the funds if the election is successful. Burke Pease of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce said he believed useful information could be pulled together without the expenditure of so much money. "You're looking at a practical evaluation versus a political evaluation. You can look at 11 alternatives or just at the three or four you know, through common sense, are the most feasible," he said.

The subcommittee will take its recommendation not to support the tax rate election to the entire agency on Friday when it meets at 4 p.m. at the Seaside City Hall. The public may attend.

Opera ensemble future is bleak

Even though the Monterey Jazz Festival Foundation approved a $5,000 grant to the Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble, the group must still raise $4,500 to remain in operation, according to dean Peter Meckel. The festival grant is contingent on Hidden Valley raising $15,000, Meckel says, and gifts and pledges total only about $10,000.

"We're making calls and writing letters, hoping that today or tomorrow help will come," Meckel said. Although March 7, Sunday, had been announced as the deadline for the ensemble, the decision to cease operations was delayed until the festival decision was made.

"We can't go any longer than this week, though. We have to push it over the top (now)," Meckel said. A hoped-for $4,000 grant from the Crosby Foundation did not materialize, he also said.

Carmel Valley fatalities

Five of six recent deaths involved booze and driving

By LESLIE JOHNSON

--On Feb. 17, 1975 at 4:55 p.m., Manuel Higuera, 22, of Seaside was riding his motorcycle eastbound on Carmel Valley Road near Los Laureles Grade when the driver of a Volkswagen bus steered his vehicle across the center line and into the cycle, killing Higuera. The bus driver's blood alcohol level was .19 — legal level of intoxication is .10. Higuera's blood alcohol level was .11, also above the legal limit.

--On May 7, 1975 at 4:45 p.m., Lewis Albert Fisher, 57, of Carmel was driving his vehicle westbound on Carmel Valley Road at 65 to 70 miles per hour when he lost control of the car, skidding back and forth across the highway before coming to rest. Not wearing a seatbelt, he was flung about the car and was found on the passenger's side of the car facing the back seat. Fisher died. His blood alcohol level was .22.

--On June 22, 1975 at 6:40 a.m., seventeen-year-old Scott Edward Kramer of Carmel Valley ran off Carmel Valley Road on a curve west of Scarlett Road, hit a tree and was killed. "For a change," a highway patrol officer says, "There was absolutely no trace of alcohol in this victim's blood."

--On June 28, 1975 at 5:45 p.m., Peter Gabor Suján, 21, of Monterey was on his way home from the Arroyo Seco with a friend when he lost control of his car on Carmel Valley Road 3.8 miles east of the Cachagua Road. The car rolled over three times. His passenger was not injured, but Suján was killed. The cause of the accident is officially reported as "unsafe speed for conditions," but an officer indicates Suján had been drinking before the accident, although he was not officially under the influence.

Those were the fatalities for 1975 on the Carmel Valley Road, a thoroughfare few highway patrol officers volunteer for. Officially "Line Beat 23," its statistics abound with cold hard facts about the dangers of mixing alcohol with driving — but those cold hard facts are written with the lifeblood of victims slain, often by their own hand, because someone had the attitude that "It can't happen to me."

Already in 1976 it has happened to two young men. John Carroll Kelley Jr., 26, of Salinas, died on an icy wind-swept night March 1 driving west on Carmel Valley Road. Apparently having visited on a local saloon, Kelley lost control of his car about 1.6 miles east of Los Laureles Grade after passing one car at over 75 miles an hour, plowing into a tree and rolling his vehicle, being ejected in the process.

Los Laureles Grade and Carmel Valley Road was the scene of this accident which took the life of John Fowler Jeffers. The highway patrol could find no signs of evasive action or quick braking and have not yet discovered a cause for the crash.

John Fowler Jeffers, 27, of Carmel Valley, was believed to be on his way home at 11:05 p.m. on Feb. 25 when, for as yet unexplained reasons, his van crashed over the curb of Carmel Valley Road at Los Laureles Grade and sent him plummeting into a utility pole. Blood analyses on these two cases have not been returned to the highway patrol to date, but alcohol is suspected as a contributing factor at least in both instances.

Fatal accidents are not the only ones caused by or contributed to by alcohol consumption by the driver, according to California Highway Patrol Officer James Iverson. His records show that in 1975 at least 10 people were injured on Carmel Valley Road in seven accidents where the driver was either legally intoxicated or had been drinking prior to the event. In at least eight instances of accidents resulting in property damage, the responsible drivers were intoxicated or had been drinking.

Including these accidents which involved alcohol, in 1975 on Carmel Valley Road, there were 45 accidents causing injury to at least 71 people. The cost of damage to property caused by at least 108 accidents where no people were injured has not been estimated.

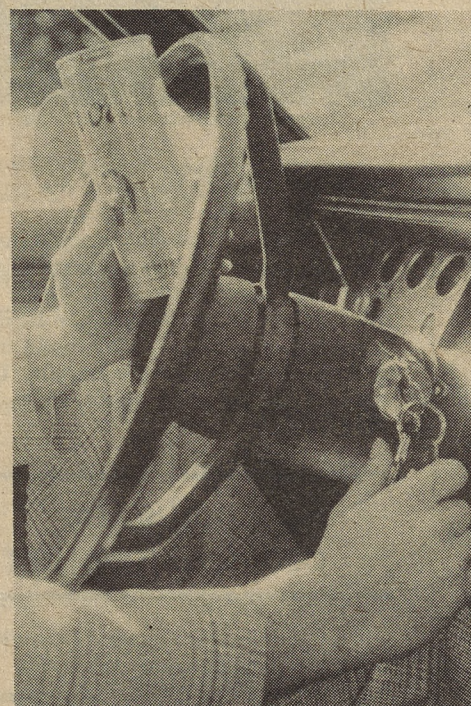

Although the number of local accidents caused by drivers who have been drinking is alarming, there are other causes which are equally preventable Officer Iverson says. "The most prevalent cause is driving at a speed unsafe for road conditions," Iverson says. "This doesn't mean driving over a 55 mile per hour limit, but driving faster than traffic conditions allow as safe. Driving too fast leads to unsafe passing and to losing control of the vehicle on a curve or when you hit a wet or frosty spot."

A third major cause of local accidents involves right of way violations, Iverson says. "Most of these occur simply because of inattention and cause accidents which defensive driving could have prevented," he says.

Along Carmel Valley Road from Highway 1 to Los Tulares subdivision, there are at least 209 places where, from public or private roads and private driveways, people may make left turns against oncoming traffic. In many instances, visibility of east and westbound traffic is highly limited so the driver wishing access to Carmel Valley Road makes an entrance "by guess and by golly." By and large, the intersections are unmarked.

Iverson says neither he nor his superiors know of any more safety measures that can be incorporated into the road to reduce the number of accidents. "What causes the ultimately will solve our problem is the human element," Iverson says. He points out that there are as many if not more, accidents on the westerly stretch of Carmel Valley Road which is four-laned and signed for 45 miles an hour, as on any two-lane stretch of the road farther east.

Lowering the speed limit in several suggested places, such as the straight stretch eastbound from Los Laureles Grade which locals know is the "last chance to pass" for several miles, would probably be a futile gesture, Iverson says. (County road department surveys show the average speed on Carmel Valley Road is 48.5 miles per hour, in areas posted 25 mph as well as in those posted 55.)

"Lowering the speed limit would only increase the number of speed violators we would have, because people are not going to drive any slower just because of a new sign. It's just like raising the speed limit would statistically give us fewer speed violators, because the majority of people on Carmel Valley Road are driving about 48 miles an hour," Iverson says.

The highway patrol opposed and is having difficulty finding a means of enforcement for the new 35 mile an hour zone in effect 24 hours a day from Schulte Road to just past the entrance to Carmel Valley Manor, Iverson says.

"The zone is so short that, in the first place, deceleration from 55 is practically impossible until you're already past the zone. Additionally, it is so short there isn't enough space for us to get a clocking on violating vehicles that would stand up in court. We can't tail a car through there, either, because anyone who checks their rearview mirror very often at all, as they should, is going to see the highway patrol behind them and slow down," he says.

The safety and enforcement problems along Carmel Valley Road are particularly unique, Iverson says. "It's a real personality factor," he says. "The population is extremely diverse. You have a large and growing retirement population, which usually means more slow drivers, who can be just as dangerous as fast ones. You get a large number of tourists and visitors, who are unfamiliar with the road. Almost everyone is a commuter, either to work or to shop, and many of them have the impulse to speed."

AGENDA CHARGES

The board of supervisors voted March 2 to make charges up to $24 a year for mailed copies of various agency agendas to all organizations and individuals except for news media and certain government agencies.

Charges include: board of supervisors, $24; planning commission, subdivision committee, zoning administrator, $12.

The board ordered copies sent to all city and county public libraries and to Monterey and King City office buildings. Supervisor Warren Church cast the sole dissenting vote.

If all our fuel looked like this, electricity would be cheaper.

PG&E was one of the nation's first utilities to develop the peaceful use of the atom into a heat source for the generation of electricity. We participated in the first commercial nuclear power plant, Vallecitos in Alameda County, in 1957, and our pioneering plant at Humboldt Bay brought 65,000 kilowatts on line in 1963.

How the atom does it

In the simplest terms, here's how a nuclear power plant works. Nuclear fuel, enriched uranium dioxide in pellet form, constitutes the core of what is called the reactor. When the uranium atoms fission (split), heat is given off. This heat boils water, producing steam which drives a turbine generator, thus producing electricity. The electricity produced in a nuclear plant is just the same as other electricity. Only the fuel used to generate it is different.

Nuclear power plants are expensive to build, but economical to operate. They can produce electricity at about 40% less cost than new oil-fired plants. When our two nuclear units at Diablo Canyon go into operation, they will save our having to buy as much as 24 million barrels of expensive imported oil a year.

Other sources of energy

Nuclear power is but one of 5 kinds of natural energy PG&E uses to produce electricity. Another is geothermal steam at The Geysers. It is relatively inexpensive, but even by optimistic estimates, it would supply only about 10% of our needs by 1985.

A third is water power. PG&E has one of the nation's most extensive hydroelectric systems, but nearly all economic and acceptable water power sites have been developed over the years. That's why natural gas and oil—our 4th and 5th sources—had to become more prominent in our energy mix.

Unfortunately, the costs of these fossil fuels have been skyrocketing. In just 5 years, the prices for gas have more than doubled and the cost per barrel of low-sulfur fuel oil has quintupled, accounting for most of our rate increases.

The energy in a nuclear power plant fuel pellet this size equals the energy in 150 gallons of oil.

Coal one day may be our sixth source of primary energy. We are in the process of acquiring reserves in Utah.

Research in solar electricity shows promise, but its use as a major source is, at best, many years away. Our industry's research in fusion, tidal and wind power some day may make them practical for generating electricity, but they simply are not available for planning today.

Facing the problem together

The demand for electricity continues to grow, partly because population itself continues to grow. The problem of meeting this growing demand is urgent.

For our part, we will continue our urgent efforts to develop all available sources, and to find new ways to use energy more efficiently, to keep you provided with adequate energy and reliable service at the lowest possible cost. For your part, the effective way to help control the supply and the spiraling cost of energy, is to use less of it. We encourage you to do so because the energy you use is too precious...and too costly...to waste.

Save energy—
you'll save money, too.

Reflecting on their "silver years" were Marian and Bob Steinmetz recently feted with an anniversary dinner party given by Valley friends.

Silver anniversary

Warm congratulations to Dr. and Mrs. Robert S. Steinmetz who shared happy memories of their wedding, which took place 25 years ago in the Bay area, with friends who helped to celebrate their silver wedding anniversary at a dinner party at Gallatin's. Cocktails preceded and after dinner liqueurs followed at the homes of Carmel Valley friends.

Marian and Bob combined their wedding anniversary and the Bicentennial year with a recent trip East where in addition to a nostalgic return to Niagara Falls they explored historical points of interest, visited Bob's brother in Massachusetts and made an auto tour of Maine.

Potluck dinner

A dinner meeting to explore the new possibilities of things that can be done for youth in Carmel Valley will be held at 6 p.m. Sunday March 14 in the Fellowship Hall of the Carmel Valley Community Chapel.

After the potluck meal, the Rev. Don Johnson will play a tape of J. Kessler, internationally known leader of youth, speaking about youth and the church.

All interested adults are welcome and are asked to attend, bringing their own table service and a dish to share — salad, hot dish, or dessert. For more information, call 659-2431, 659-2278, or 659-4482.

Smoking meeting

Parents concerned about smoking on the Carmel High School campus are invited to a discussion at 7:30 p.m. tonight in Room 9 at the High School. Facts collected this evening will be presented at the special meeting on "Student Smoking" called by the governing board of the Carmel Unified School District for 7:30 Thursday, March 18, in the library of the Carmel Middle School.

Kiwanis anniversary

The Kiwanis Club of Carmel Valley celebrated their silver anniversary Saturday evening with a dinner party attended by 70 members and guests.

According to club president John Von Berg, who MCed the event, "It was the largest attendance for a Kiwanis evening event in the history of the club. The decorations were beautiful, the people were lively, and everyone had a good time!"

The 25 year history of the organization was cleverly described by Lou Gardner with appropriate exaggerations and fables about past presidents who included Ed Marcucci, Lou Allaire, Rex White, Paul Porter, Sterling Mummert, Joe Ricupero, Charles Strathmeyer, Otto Huebner, John Scroggs, Jack George and Bob Wehe. They in turn recalled incidents during Gardner's presidency to complete the chronology.

Besides appropriate music by the Kiwanis Quartette, Raz Belleci entertained with quips and tricks of magic.

One of the highlights of the evening was the presentation of a Kiwanis Life Membership to Otto Huebner, who was the District Lt. Governor in 1974-75. The award made by District Governor, Bill De Berry, was secured after application made by the local club was approved by Kiwanis International.

George Washington's birthday was the theme for the February benefit bridge and canasta party given by the ladies of St. Dunstan's at the Flight Road home of Kathryn Walker.

Co-hostesses Doke McInroe and Shirley Biggins served cherry pie to the 44 guests and decorated the tables with red cloths, white place mats, and centered them with Christmas cacti in bright blue pots. Scores were kept in tallies trimmed with hatchets and the Washington silhouette.

The cacti were presented as table prizes to Anne Franke, Peg Arnold, Rhoda Cutter, Gene Fairchild, Ruth Mullins, Dorothy Gonzanback, Paula Washington, Irene Selfridge, Vera Stokes, Jean De Haas and Shirley Biggins.

First place in bridge went to Ruth Mullins, Dorothy Gozanback, second; Canasta first and second went to Jean De Haas and Nellie Mirani.

Otter discusses coastal plan

By DAVID COLE

"It would be hard to represent the official position of the coastal plan," admits Lee Otter, Central Coast Regional Commission planner.

The 443-page document is imposing and, according to its own letter of transmittal, "takes into account the wide range of often-conflicting views..."

So what is the average citizen to make of this immense volume, covering everything that affects the coast, from energy to agriculture, from mineral resources to air quality?

Otter concedes that the average citizen generally makes whatever he wants out of it.

"People living in the Highlands, for instance, may think that the plan will keep Los Angeles people out," Otter says, "and people living in Los Angeles think the plan will let them into Pebble Beach for free."

But Otter, who spent much of his life in the Carmel area, personally worked on the plan, so he has some pretty educated guesses to make as to how, if passed, the plan would affect Carmel and its environs.

"If it weren't for policy 142 I might not be able to support the coastal plan."

Policy 142 states, "Use of the coast for recreation and education shall be controlled where necessary to prevent significant damage to natural resources by tidepool collecting, underwater fishing, trampling of marshes, traffic on dunes and bluffs etc."

Otter feels this policy is particularly important to residents of this area because of the high recreational value of Carmel Bay. Far from bringing in more divers and surfers, Otter sees the coastal plan as setting some limits on recreation.

He points to San Jose Beach (Monastery Beach) and Carmel Point, where weekends bring in cars full of divers, and suggests that the coastal plan may alleviate the congestion.

Positive means can be employed, Otter thinks, to avoid the "solid wall of vans" and the human erosion that occurs in these heavily used areas.

Otter suggests that parking for San Jose Beach might simply be put on the other side of the road, or at least further away from the beach itself. As it is now, this spot is one of the easiest to get to along the central coast and Otter thinks it might be better to make the area attractive only to those divers who really want to use it.

Another possibility would be to make access easier at some less fragile Peninsula diving spot, possibly adding things such as showers, lockers, and other diver facilities in order to draw the traffic away from places like Carmel Point.

Even the State Department of Parks and Recreation would be answerable to the coastal plan, Otter contends. The plan might force them to "tighten up their policies" in cases where recreation was having a detrimental effect along the coast.

"Take Odello west, for instance," Otter says. "If Parks and Recreation made a decision to install campgrounds in there, the commission would probably turn them down. Odello west will probably be leased out to someone who will continue to farm the land."

Agriculture is an important part of the coastal plan, according to Otter, and allows the land to do double duty: a scenic easement is provided while the land remains in production. Otter sees Odello east, even if it is not purchased by the sanitary district, as remaining agricultural. In order to keep these 135 acres in their present productive status, an agency might have to purchase the property and then lease out farming rights.

The only other agricultural land which Otter sees as being influenced by the coastal plan is the Val Verde Drive area, and Otter sees that as being "a close call."

The coastal policy of concentrating development conflicts with the policy of protecting coastal agriculture, and so Otter expects the Val Verde controversy to "boil for a long time to come."

The rest of the commercial development at the mouth of Carmel Valley will probably fill out, Otter thinks, since it is already committed, although he saw a lot of detrimental environmental effects being brought out in the recent EIR for the revised Carmel Valley

Master Plan.

But generally the coastal plan will have little effect on the valley mouth development, Otter says, and the issue of whether to allow two new hotels to go in near the corner of Rio Road and Carmel Rancho Boulevard will probably be settled by the local populace.

There does remain a possibility, however, that Highway 1, as it goes up Carmel Hill, might limit development in the valley mouth since the coastal plan does deal with congestion along the coast road. The bottleneck between Rio Road and Ocean Avenue technically interferes with access to the Big Sur coast and, for this reason, Otter sees some possibility that the commission might have something to say about hotels and other development that could worsen the situation.

As far as the rest of Carmel Valley is concerned, Otter says, "You have to keep in mind that the influence of the coastal plan decreases as you move inland."

Although the resource management area in the valley extends past Carmel Valley Village, something like the proposed Carmel Valley Ranch Plan would not really come under the coastal plan's scrutiny unless pollution or damage to the water supply were likely. Even then, Otter points out, there are agencies already set up to deal with that kind of problem.

The resource management line also purposefully misses the San Clemente Dam, although Otter hints that implementation of the plan might make grants for increasing the Peninsula's water supply more likely.

In a way, Otter regrets that the plan will not have more influence away from the coast. He even sees the possibility that the final coastal bill will limit jurisdiction to 1,000 yards from the shoreline, for simplicity's sake.

"We could have a complete moratorium on the coast," Otter says hypothetically, "but a development 20 miles inland could produce more damage along the shoreline than a hotel built on the beach."

Otter points out that there are limits to growth along the coast, but not limits to influx — tourists and sportsmen may increase indefinitely.

SOUTH COAST

Although Otter feels that Carmel itself is already pretty much in line with what coastal legislation will demand of cities along the shoreline, he sees some dramatic changes in the developmental trends for the Big Sur coast.

Moving south from the Odello property, Otter imagines that the Stuyvesant-Fish Reiley and Hudson estates will eventually be developed, but that, in return for allowing that development, the commission will ask that the buildings be clustered and that the scenic easement of open fields now visible should be maintained.

At Yankee Beach, Otter does not see much possibility of public access because he feels that the present number of people who have access is probably as much as the area can handle.

Malpaso Beach is also small and sensitive, but Otter predicts public access at some time in the future, although access will be limited. One good way to open a beach to limited public access is simply to allow no road access (only trail) and not mark the beach with any kind of sign.

Otter says the coastline from Otter Cove to Garrapata Creek must be purchased to keep it from being developed, but he would hate to see it treated as anything but a strictly

For a number of years now the Monterey County Fairgrounds has played host to the Golden West National Morgan Horse Show sponsored by the Northern California Morgan Horse Association over the Fourth of July weekend. The show site was not chosen for its amenities nor for the number of local exhibitors because there aren't very many. It was simply an equalizing travel distance for northern and southern California exhibitors and those from further away.

A local person who does show in the National Morgan Horse Show is Dale Haass of Garzas Road whose good stallion Big Bend Top Notch won the Amateur Owner Park Championship. Now Dale is trying to do something to encourage more local people to own, ride and show Morgan horses. He has leased the O'Connor property on Carmel Valley Road just below the intersection with hands and weighed 800 pounds. Justin Morgan wasn't too impressed by this and leased him out to a neighbor, Robert Evans who used him as a general work horse.

Small as he was, the little stallion proved himself able to out pull and out work any of the other horses in the neighborhood. Then for play, he proved himself able to out run and out trot any of the other horses in the neighborhood.

Well, naturally all the neighbors wanted to have a horse like him. Since they couldn't have the prodigy himself, they did the next best thing and backed their mares up to him. The little horse again proved himself to outdo all the other horses in the neighborhood. Big mares, little mares, wide mares, thin mares, tall mares, short mares, it didn't matter what kind of mares were bred to Figure. What came out were replicas of himself. And THEIR

Allan, Black Hawk's son, trotted the record 2:25½ mile in 1853. No, don't sniff about all the 2:20 and faster miles nowadays. Ethan Allan did it in leather harness and a wooden big-wheeled sulky with grease in its axles instead of plastic bearings.

The Standardbred people freely admit their native American trotters are descended from Morgan horses. So do Saddlebred owners, and Quarter Horse breeders and Tennessee Walker(s).

In fact, the nineteenth century which in Britain is called the Victorian Era could in America be called the Morgan Horse Era. The Morgan plowed the fields, pulled the taxicabs and carriages, delivered the groceries, explored with the pioneers, supported the settlers, charged with the cavalry, recharged the Remount Service, and whenever it could be arranged—escaped with the Ford Road and hopes to turn it into a showplace for Morgans.

Having the Golden West Show here every year has given a number of people a chance to see fine horses in action. Dale figures, quite rightly we believe, that almost everyone who has seen the Morgan Horse perform will want to have one.

At least that's the way it has worked out for the last 187 years. The Morgan, unlike any other modern breed of horses, has evolved virtually from one single animal. If that contradicts the facts as you learned them in eighth grade biology, prepare to be even more amazed. In 1791, a school teacher named Justin Morgan received a two year old colt named Figure as part payment of a debt. This little bay horse stood only 14 progeny looked just like him too. That's called "prepotent," honey.

Furthermore, they didn't just look like their founding father. They could out pull, out work, out run, and out trot, every other stallion's get just as he could.

Somewhere along here, Justin Morgan the man died. His horse Figure, who in the manner of the day was referred to as the Morgan horse, assumed his whole name—Justin Morgan. The horse died in 1821 of an injury at the age of 32. By that time he was not the only Morgan horse in the world. Everybody wanted one. If you can't beat 'em, join 'em!

A Morgan grandson, Black Hawk, foaled in 1833 became a celebrated sire of American trotters including the first horse ever to break the two minute thirty second mark for the mile. Ethan Indians.

Thus you see Morgan characteristics among the mustangs, in the Appaloosa breed, in Mexican Galiceno ponies, in circus horses especially liberty horses, in American Paint Horses, and many Palominos. If Henry Ford hadn't popularized his infernal combustion engine, you'd probably see many more of them today.

"Ford cars may be okay, but it's more fun to drive a Morgan," says Phyllis Shopbell of Scarlett Road who has just completed a luxurious new barn for her horses. The Shopbell's four year old gelding Oradon has been showing very well in harness classes and under saddle. Phyllis would like to start a pleasure driving club and would be interested in hearing from other post graduates of the gasoline engine.

For several years, Phyllis Shopbell has organized a tour to the Grand National Morgan Horse Show sponsored in Oklahoma City by the American Morgan Horse Association. Last year 46 persons from as far away as British Columbia and San Diego made the trip and Phyllis expects even more for the fourth annual show in October.

The award winning children's author Doris Gates of Carmel Highlands has been a Morgan fancier for years. Also there are Morgan horse owners and breeders in Chualar, Gilroy, Morgan Hill, and the San Jose area. Further, what you see the rangers riding in National Parks and Monuments are probably registered Morgans from the breeding farm operated by the National Park Service at Pt. Reyes National Seashore.

In his new facility Dale Haass hopes to train and present fine horses at their best. He has enlarged what was a small dressage ring by thirty feet and plans a driving track around the perimeter of the seeded pasture. The word "morgan" by the way translates from the Welsh as "sea-dweller." Dale invites all us dwellers by the sea to come see his good horses.

MPC to present British comedy

British dramatist Tom Stoppard's comedy, "The Real Inspector Hound," opens on the main stage of the Monterey Peninsula College Theatre at 8:30 p.m. Thursday, March 18.

It will play Friday and Saturday (March 19-20) and March 24, 25, 26 and 27 with George Kaufman's comedy, "The Still Alarm," as a companion piece.

A upper-class, English society comedy, "The Real Inspector Hound" is directed by Peter De Bono and is described as a play-within-a-play, a whodunnit involving a romantic quadrangle and a murder. It was produced successfully in London in 1968, two years after Stoppard's "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead" won him acclaim from critics and the public.

"Travesties" is his current dramatic success now playing in New York.

Like "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern," Moon and Birdboot, the two drama critics who become involved in the action of "The Real Inspector Hound," are outsiders who trigger the action. Kevin Swehla plays Moon and Marty Warner is Birdboot in the MPC production.

Others in the cast are Jane Beach as Mrs. Drudge; Tunney Barrett, Simon; Annie Atherton, Felicity; June Barrett, Cynthia; Bill Duke, Magnus; Bob Sharen, Hound, and Bernie Mulligan, Higgs.

Tim Thomas, student director of the recent Standing Room Only (SRO) production of "When You Comin' Back, Red Ryder?" makes his main stage debut as director of "The Still Alarm" an English comedy about a hotel on fire. The play will follow each evening's performance of "The Real Inspector Hound." In the cast are Bruce Roberts as Bob, Sheldon Sellars as Ed, and Doug Rosskilly as the bellboy, James Honroth and Barney Hulse play the firemen.

Tickets are $2 general and $1.50 for students and military.

Horror films set

Two horror films made in the 1960's will share billing at the Monterey Peninsula College Film Gallery on Saturday, March 13, in the MPC Music Hall.

"Village of the Damned" is based on the novel "The Midwich Cuckoo." Its setting is a peaceful English village where some strangely beautiful children, born when the villagers were under a temporary spell, have become intelligent giants.

"Invasion of the Body Snatchers" has been called one of the few real spine-tinglers. Its plot deals with residents of a cozy Southwestern town, who are duplicated by peapods who plan to take over the world.

The showing starts at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $1 for adults and children, 50 cents for ASMPCC card holders. Gold Card holders are admitted free.

Banjo player set for jazz meeting

George Baker, renowned banjo player, will be the featured artist at the Monterey Bay Hot Jazz Society meeting Sunday, March 14, at the Monterey Moose Lodge, 555 Canyon Del Rey Road, Del Rey Oaks.

Baker has performed with Turk Murphy, Spike Jones and many other jazz groups since he won first place on the Horace Heidt Talent Show as a teenager in 1940.

In addition, 30 to 40 top jazz artists will play improvisations during the concert which starts at 2 p.m. and continues into evening.

Anyone who enjoys jazz may join the society - listeners as well as musicians - and family participation is encouraged. Memberships will be sold at the door. For further information call 449-8026.

Navajo weaving to be demonstrated

A demonstration of Navajo weaving will be presented by Inez Miller of Kayenta, Ariz., on Tuesday, March 16, at 7:30 p.m. at the Pacific Grove Art Museum.

Participants will have the opportunity to observe Ms. Miller working on a rug and view the work of other weavers of Navajo designs. Photographs of life on the reservation will be shown and Navajo fry bread will be served.

Bruce Belknap, who may teach a course on Navajo looms and weaving at Monterey Peninsula College this summer under the auspices of MPC's Ethnic Studies Division, will introduce Ms. Miller and lead the discussion-demonstration.

Ms. Miller's father was a Navajo medicine man and chief and her mother a rug weaver from whom she learned her art. She and her brothers and sisters were sheep herders. Ms. Miller took up rug weaving when she returned to the reservation from school in Tuba City and Fort Apache. Belknap was one of her students at Kayenta and is arranging her trip here.

The demonstration is sponsored by Community Services of Monterey Peninsula College. Admission is $1.50.

The Duck Butter Band, one of the finer dance bands on the Monterey Peninsula, is back in action after a brief layoff with a two week gig at the Ramada Inn. The quintet will play at the Ramada through March 20 and then it's on to weekend work at the Boiler Room from April 7 through Memorial Day weekend.

Butter emphasizes funk and jazz and their sound is both well mixed and tight. If you like the idea of "sitting one out" and being able to enjoy the band's music, give Butter a try soon.

Duck Butter is: Rex Krebs, lead guitar, vocals; Ken Lopez, lead guitar, vocals; Nello Torri, drums; Scott Eychaner, bass; Mark Ross, keyboards.

During their brief break from area spotlights, the guys backed Atlantic Records blues artist Teddy Morrow at a recording session at Super Sound Studio. Mark Ross also was busy doing some taping work for Jack Daughterty. Daughterty, who found and produced the Carpenters until recently, is currently finishing a fine jazz album at Super Sound.

Speaking of jazz, the folks over at the Monterey Jazz Festival have committed $26,000 out of last year's proceeds to provide grants and scholarships. One of the awards has been named in honor of the late Ralph Gleason.

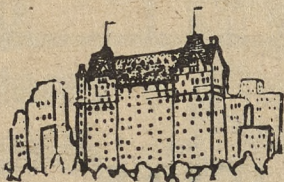

This year's festival - the 19th annual - is set for September 17-19.

Sal Mercurio, who has made many a fan with his accordion playing at the Del Monte Hyatt House, will be setting out on his annual fishing trek to Alaska sometime in June. Meanwhile, he's working various country clubs and beach clubs and hoping to find a regular job until his summer jaunt.

New albums by Boz Scaggs, Genesis, Rolling Stone bassist Bill Wyman, Wishbone Ash, Poco, Kool and the Gang and Eddie Harris are the current favorites of Peninsula record buyers. Jim Beanblossom, manager of Odyssey Records, says that new efforts by the Rolling Stones and Led Zeppelin are due soon but that Joe Walsh's next album has been delayed for another week.

"And Now For Something Completely Different," a collage of satirical efforts by Monty Python is set for the Dream Theatre on Saturday. The Dream has also won the right to show the latest movie by Truffaut - "The Story of Adele H" - on March 24. "Adele" is up for Best Foreign Film at the Academy Awards.

One final note: Todd Brown's 1932 classic "Freaks" is set for mid-March at the 812 Theatre.

Historical buffs should note that the Fort Ord Recreation Center is in the middle of a Bicentennial look at the Monterey Peninsula on Tuesday evenings at 8:00. Upcoming topics include art, fiction writers and archeology. Contact the Rec center for more details.

Be Young with Yoga

Yoga, the world's most ancient system for physical and mental fitness proposes the age has little to do with how many years ago you were born. Rather it depends upon how many of the "characteristics of age" you possess. A person can be "old," stiff and out of shape, at 40 and can be youthfully vital and flexible at 70.

What are some of these characteristics? Let us compare the 8 major areas:

AGE

1. Stiffness — tightness — immobility; awkwardness — lack of poise.
2. Tension — nervousness — irritability — poor disposition; insomnia.
3. Fatigue — weariness — exhaustion.
4. Inadequate blood circulation with resultant dull complexion, wrinkles, general poor health.

Padres lose in section finals

By ART BLACK, JR.

Carmel High School's varsity basketball season came to an end last Saturday evening at Stanford University's Maples Pavilion with the Padre's defeat at the hands of Del Mar High School of Campbell. The game was the consolation game in the Central Coast Section finals. Carmel, completely overwhelmed by both the size of the other three schools involved and the brand of basketball played in the San Jose-San Francisco area, played a defensive game that gained the respect of many of the fans and other players. In Friday's game against St. Ignatius of San Francisco, the Padres held the Wildcats to only 49 points. During their regular season, SI had scored less than 49 points only eight times out of their 28 game schedule. Saturday's score against Del Mar was 64-52. Del Mar scored less than 64 points only five times this season.

Carmel's trip to Stanford began with a victory over Mission Trails Athletic League co-champion Marelo two weeks ago. Playing at neutral Palma High School, the Padres were down five points at the half and midway through the third stanza Carmel was down by nine. With 3:45 left in the third period, the Marelo Panthers led 27-18. They were to score only three more points in the game. The Padres scored six points in the rest of the third quarter and with baskets by Bill Colohan, Thane Taylor, and Dan Sturges they trailed at the beginning of the fourth quarter by only three points, 27-24. With 5:50 left in the game, Alex Burz scored on a layup to cut the Marelo lead to a point, 27-26. Shortly thereafter, Bill Colohan hit a jump shot to give the Padres a one-point lead. Marelo's Brian McNutley retaliated with a basket to give the Panthers a single point lead. Dan Sturges countered with a jump shot to make the score 30-29 Carmel. At 3:52 left in the game, Marelo's Bob Wagner hit the first of two free throws to tie the score 30-30. It was to be the last Panther score in the game. At 3:20, Alex Burz received a pass from Bob Pollard and scored on a layup to put Carmel ahead 32-30. Carmel then effectively put in a working stall which lasted three minutes. At 0:22 Burz was fouled but missed his first free throw. At 0:18, Burz was fouled again and made the first of two free throws to make the score 33-30. With five seconds left in the game, Bill Colohan was fouled by Bob Wagner, and scored the final Padre point with his first free throw. Final score was 34-30, Carmel.

That victory brought the Mission Trails Athletic League crown home to Carmel, their first since 1969, and gave the Padres a berth in the Region IV playoffs. Last week the Padres played Monterey Bay League champion Salinas at Hartnell College. Carmel won 46-37 after a very effective third quarter which saw the Padres outscore Salinas 16-4. High point man for the game was Carmel guard Dan Sturges with 14. Salinas Cowboy Eric Barstad was high point man for Salinas with 12.

The Padres went to Stanford as Region IV representative to the Central Coast Section Championships. It was Carmel's first trip to the CCS as Region IV representative.

Last Friday night, Carmel met Region I champ St. Ignatius of San Francisco. Carmel was cold from the free throw line and from the floor, making only 40 per cent of their free throws and 32 per cent from the floor. The outstanding part of Carmel's game was their defense which gained in the second quarter and held SI to 49 points in the game. Padre junior Bob Pollard was Carmel's high scorer with eight points, and SI's big man, Bill O'Neill, was the game's top point man with 14.

Saturday evening, in the consolation bracket, Carmel met Del Mar High of Campbell. The Padres had good second and fourth quarters, keeping within two points in the scoring each time, but the Del Mar Dons got off to a good start by outscoring Carmel 20-12 in the first quarter, and gained five points in the third quarter by outscoring the Padres 15-10. High point man in the game was Don center

Noel Cross with 17 points, followed by Padre Bill Colohan with 16. Four of the five Del Mar scorers were in double figures, but Bob Pollard was the only other Padre to score in double figures, having 12 points for the evening.

Again, Carmel's long suit was defense. The Padres took only three seniors to Stanford with them. Dan Sturges, Bill Colohan and Bob Pollard are all juniors and will be returning next year. Carmel, thus less experienced than either of their opponents, nevertheless played with composure despite the two losses.

On the Region IV championships team were seniors Thane Taylor, Alex Burz, Tom Pollard, and Mo Lawitzke. Juniors included Bill Colohan, Dan Sturges, Bob Pollard, Les Welge, and Doug Weller. Sophomores, brought up from the championship JV team for the tournament playoffs, were Jon Whipple, John Frincke, and Tom Frincke.

How to get up to 67 miles on a dollar's worth of fuel.

Only a few cars in America can do it. And only one of them is a good-sized luxury car: The Peugeot 504 diesel.

It runs on fuel that generally costs several cents a gallon less than gasoline (although exactly what it costs depends on exactly where you buy it). And it gets 35 mpg on the highway and 27 mpg in the city.* So if you do a lot of driving, the Peugeot Diesel may be just the car for you.

Odello agreement appears near

By DAVID COLE

The Carmel Sanitary District Monday night voted to send the Odellos one more proposal concerning the purchase of their property on the east side of Highway 1 — and this time their proposal seems destined for acceptance.

Through letters and phone calls between the district and Odello Attorney Theodore J. Labhard, an agreement acceptable to both parties — with only a few items remaining in doubt — has been worked out.

By a 3 to 1 vote, the board ordered attorney Don

Freeman to prepare a formal counter proposal to the Odello offer contained in a letter from Labhard. Under the conditions of the district's proposal:

—A total purchase price of $2 million would be paid for the 135-acre site.

—The district would pay $50,000 per year for a 2½ year straight option to buy the Odello East property. This money would not go toward the purchase price, should the district decide to buy.

—The district, but not the Odellos, would be permitted to withdraw from this agreement after one year, and at 90-day intervals thereafter.

The $50,000 per year option price could cost customers of the sanitary district an additional $2 to $3 per month, according to board chairman Don Kirk. Although this money would not go toward the purchase price of the property, the fee would, in effect, keep the Odello land off the market until the completion of the area-wide facilities plan in December 1968.

The understanding of the board, however, is that the district will have a fairly good idea after one year as to whether the Odello Property will provide a suitable alternative to the present Carmel Bay outfall. An Area of Special Biological Significance (ASBS) order issued last spring forbids the continuous use of an ocean outfall in the bay.

Although most points contained in the district's new proposal were agreeable to the Odellos, Freeman claimed, the owners requested that any additional taxes made on the property, during the time the district holds the option, be paid for by the district. Odellos also indicated that they wanted to have the use of their buildings on the east side of Highway 1 as long as the Odellos are permitted to farm artichokes on Odello West, which is now being purchased by the state parks and recreation department.

The district, in its latest proposal refused to pay additional taxes on the property and granted Odellos only a five-year use of their buildings, with the understanding that the district would look favorably on renewing the use permit as long as it is compatible with the district's facilities.

If the district's proposal is accepted by the Odellos, it must be sent to the State Water Resources Control Board (SWRCB) in Sacramento for review before final approval. The SWRCB will decide whether or not the option agreement will stand in the way of state or Environmental Protection Agency grants.

Under the present grant arrangements, up to 87½ per cent of the $2 million cost of the Odello property can be refunded to the district. Freeman, however, pointed out that the $50,000 per year option funds might not qualify for a grant.

The board's Odello offer — as past offers — was opposed by Ted Well and Jim Pruitt (absent Monday). Kirk, Charlotte Hurst and Ken McGinnis voted in favor of the new option.

The real break in the seemingly stymied negotiation between the Odellos and the district came this month when the Odellos, for the first time, offered to hold the land off the market for longer than 30 days.

Furthermore, any Odello-district agreement would also be signed by Omega Properties, the company which had planned to develop Odello East.

The district's monthly meeting began with a presentation of the Carmel Bay monitoring system by Kinetic Laboratories Inc. of Santa Cruz. The monitoring program, required by the state, included both a physical-chemical study of the outfall area and a biological study of life in two areas of the ocean floor.

Dr. Philip Carpenter and Tony Weaver showed slides of their monitoring methods and explained that they had found no adverse effects of the ocean outfall, except in a very small area of damage close in to the diffusers. They also found very little difference between their data and the data gathered in the 1974-75 project.

The two divers briefly discussed problems such as the natural differences between the "sewer rock" area close in to the outfall, and the control area farther away. They also suggested that specifications should be more sensitive to monitoring changes and talked about using improved monitoring techniques such as photoquadrant methods.

In other matters, the district — after a closed executive session — decided to pay an additional $350 per month, retroactive to January 1, 1976, to attorney Freeman, to be paid through the office of board attorney Shelburn Robison.

The additional attorney fee has been made necessary because of legal dealings with the Odellos and with the SWRCB in Sacramento.

Also at the meeting, Alan C. Miller II indicated that 14 neighbors on the east side of Tolando Trail in Rancho Rio Vista would like to be annexed by the district.

Miller told the board that the estimated cost was $40,000, to be paid by floating a bond.

Get well wishes are extended to Trampas Shakal, who broke his leg in a snow-skiing accident Sunday, and to Joey Shakal, who is still recovering from a water-skiing accident Sept. 20, 1975.

controlled reserve. One way of doing that would be to put up a security fence along the area and direct public use (through access) to Garrapata Beach. Those interested and hardy enough to walk north along the reserve would have access to the delicate stretch.

"Without this acquisition," Otter says, speaking of the area from Otter Cove to Garrapata Beach, "development will march right down the coast to San Simeon."

The proposed reserve here would separate Monterey Peninsula development from Big Sur. It will define the limits of the spread of growth.

The stretch of coast between the Little Sur River mouth and Point Sur are marked for long range plans by the coastal commission, in the event that the El Sur Ranch is sold for development.

"But," Otter says, "that's a ways in the future. The object of the coastal plan is to concentrate on the things it can accomplish right now, then worry about the problems that are harder to solve."

While Otter has his feelings about how the coastal plan will affect the area, should it be passed, he stresses that he can only make guesses.
